Stuart A. Lien learns what love is

● In a faraway place, billions of miles away there is a tiny planet called Luster. It is the home to many Special Beings, including Stuart A. Lien. And like many other Lusterians, Stuart dreamed of one day traveling to Earth. And guess what? He did! He learned that love can be shown in many ways. Come explore how Earthlings show love; whether it is sharing an umbrella, a kiss or simply in the flowers we plant, there is love all around us! Where do you see love?

Ask before you take

● In the deepest part of the Big Blue Sea lives Oscar, a Big Blow Fish. Despite of his size, Oscar is very shy. In fact, he only comes out of his cave at night, when the others are fast asleep. That is, until Oscar found out that Stanley, the meanest Octopus in the Sea, had something that Oscar really wanted to borrow but was too scared to ask. He was faced with a dilemma... Unfortunately, Oscar finds himself in "hot water" when darkness takes over the sea. Will Oscar be able to straighten things out again and save the sea?

Chloe protects her planet

● Chloe's planet is having some really serious problems. There are no minerals left in the soil, and they can't grow any food without them. And it's all because of a critical lack of nitrogen... Could it be that they were forcing Chloe to leave? Or was it that even though she was a scientist, she couldn't get anyone to listen to her plan? What do you do when grown-ups won't listen to you? You do what a scientist does! You devise a plan... you achieve the impossible... and then you go find a solution!

A dragon named Egg

● It is hard to be different. For Egg it was almost impossible. Being the first dragon ever born from a cracked egg made him remarkable. How do you find your place in a family of legendary dragons, when you are so very different from them all? Small for his age and not even able to fly yet... Egg hates his silly name. It reminds him every day of just how different he is from everyone else. Sometimes the smallest being can make the biggest change. Sometimes those we expect the least from are the ones who surprise us the most.

Many secrets are fun to keep—for instance, a surprise birthday gift for Mom. But some secrets make kids feel bad. They are best shared with parents.

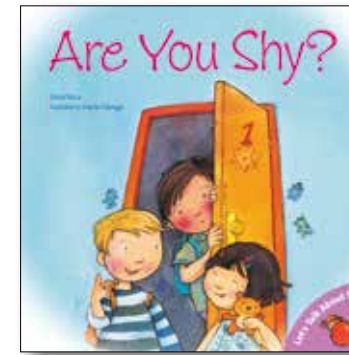

Young children are confused and hurt when their parents decide to divorce. This sensitively written book assures boys and girls that children are in no way responsible.

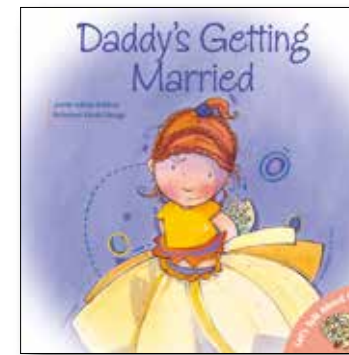

It is normal when children are troubled by death of a pet or a loved one. This story tells how a little boy learns to accept the death of his pet dog.

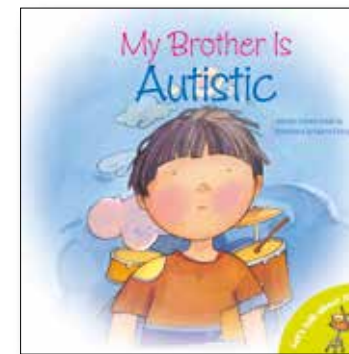

This appealing book celebrates the differences between people of different races and ethnic backgrounds.

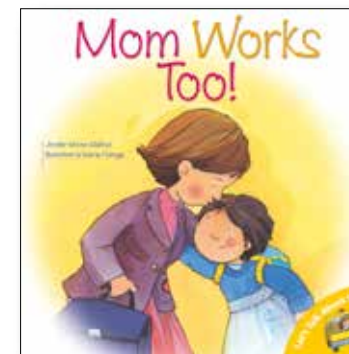

This book advises younger kids on ways to cope with a common problem: shyness.

Children of divorced parents are sometimes troubled when one parent decides to remarry. This book offers them reassurance.

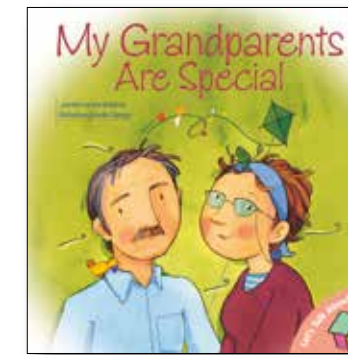

The main character in this story discovers that it isn't easy living with autism, through the experience of having an autistic brother. He also discovers that being autistic doesn't mean being less intelligent...

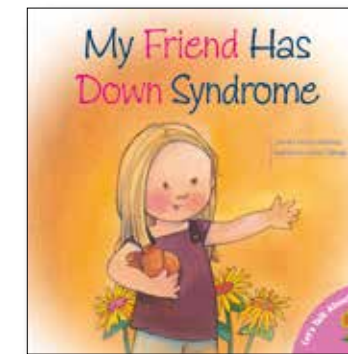

The story is about a mother that goes back to work after her maternity leave. It is hoped that after reading this text, children will have a better understanding of the many reasons which surround a family's decision for both parents to work outside the home.

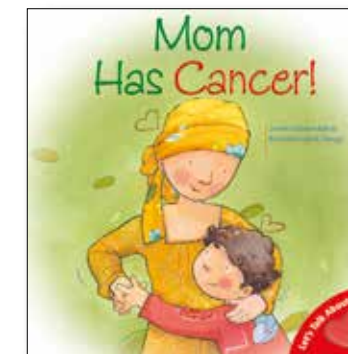

Getting lost in a public place is a frightening and potentially dangerous experience for younger children. This book tells children and parents what to do.

This book explores the extraordinary loving relationship that typically exists between very young children and their grandparents.

This is a story of friendship. It tells a story about two young kids who become best of friends despite their differences. This inspiring story is a step in the right direction of eliminating existing barriers between children with Down Syndrome!

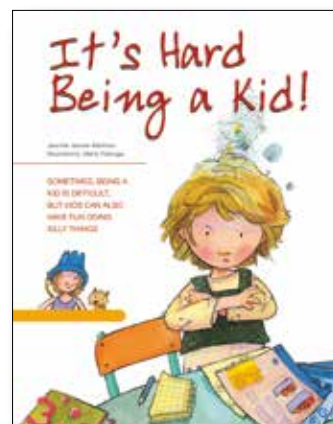

This book encourages parents to be open, honest and straightforward with their children regarding their diagnosis. Children will be able to work through their own anxiety a lot easier when they know that they can look to you for support.

Live and learn

● Books in the Live and Learn series take a child's point of view and especially the view of children who either suffer from some physical challenge or lack self-confidence in going about their everyday activities. They encourage kids never to be afraid of a challenge. Following each story there are four pages of suggested activities that relate to the book's theme. A final two-page section offers advice to parents.

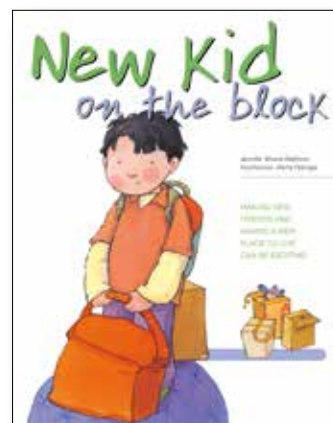

A child's desire to be like the other kids and just have fun is put to the test. But first he needs to learn how to become independently mobile while being confined to a wheelchair before he can focus on mastering an activity such as basketball.

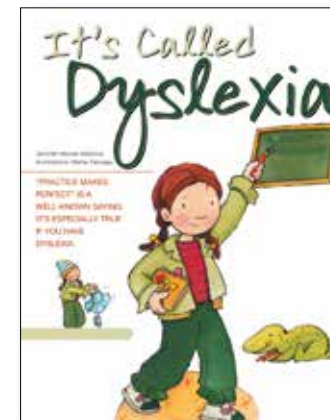

Some of the realities of being a kid are explored through the eyes of a child. At first it seems that being a kid is a tough job and that grown-ups have it easy but after careful consideration, one realizes that being a kid isn't so bad after all and that becoming a grown-up can wait!

This story's little boy plays on a football team. When they forget to play fair, a boy on the opposing team is injured. They feel badly about the accident and come to realize that being a good sport is more important than winning.

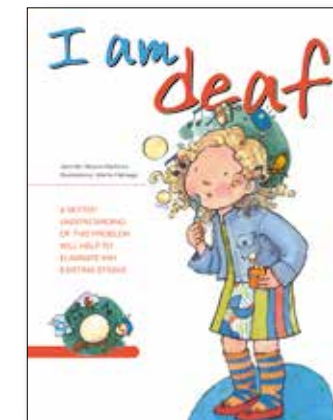

This is a story that many children can share. It is about a child and his family who go through the emotional experience of moving. Although saying goodbye to a home and old friends can be difficult, making new friends and having a new place to live can be exciting.

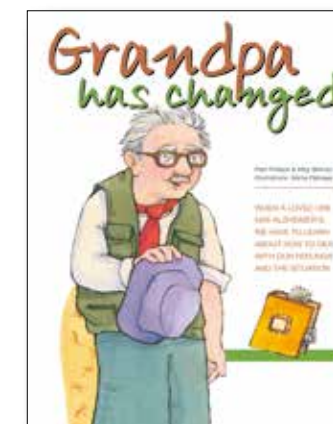

The child in this story knows the alphabet, but she sometimes has trouble putting all the letters together to read words. No matter how hard she tries, she often mixes up the letters or writes them backwards. She's unhappy until her teacher explains that she has dyslexia, and that with special help she will overcome her reading problem.

There's a boy in school who can't sit still. He always forgets to raise his hand. He doesn't wait his turn. He can't follow the rules. At recess the other kids don't want him on their team. The boy wants to do all those things. The trouble is he can't. He has ADHD.

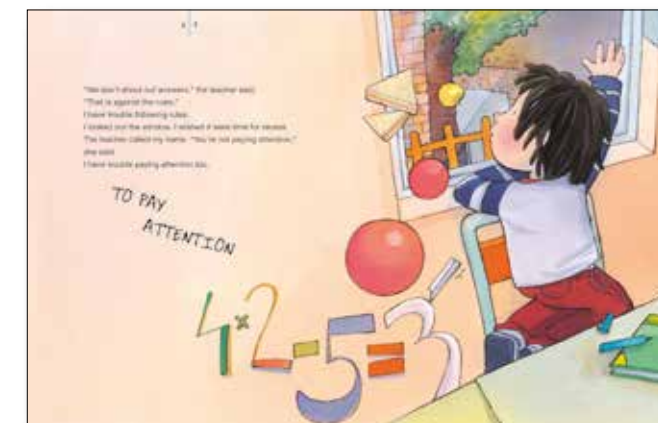

Lana is 10 years old and she's deaf. Throughout the story, Lana discusses what it is like to be deaf and some of the things that she uses to help her learn at school and to communicate with others. Although Lana uses a hearing aid, she can't always hear everything clearly but it doesn't stop her from being a child.

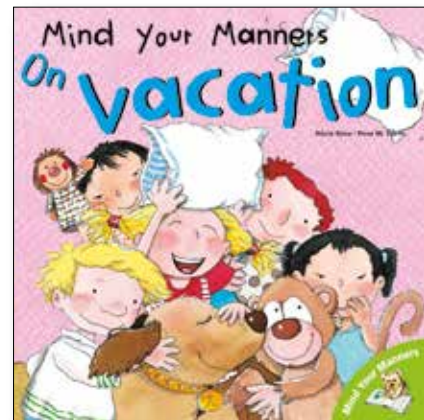

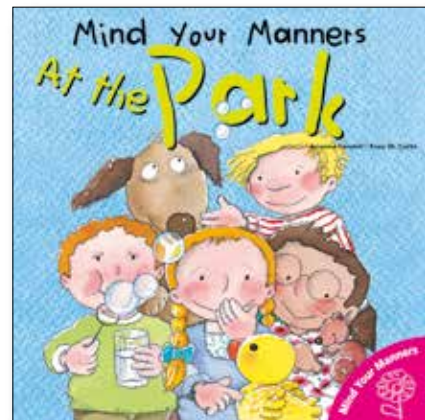

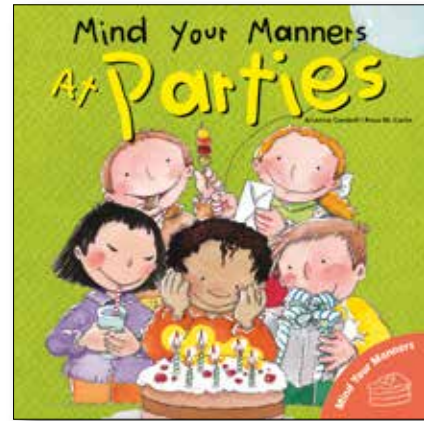

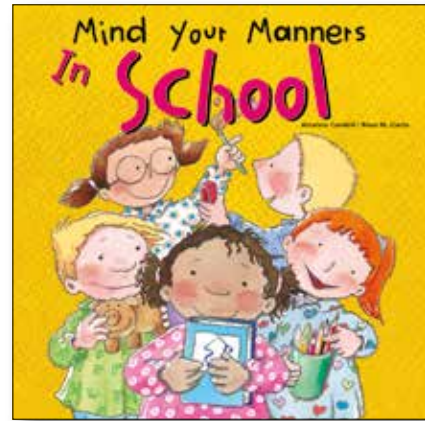

The boy in this story has always loved visiting his grandfather. But lately Grandpa has been different. He can't take the boy fishing or go on walks with him anymore. Grandpa doesn't look sick but a nurse comes to the house to take care of him. What is going on? He has Alzheimer's disease.

Look what I did with my dad

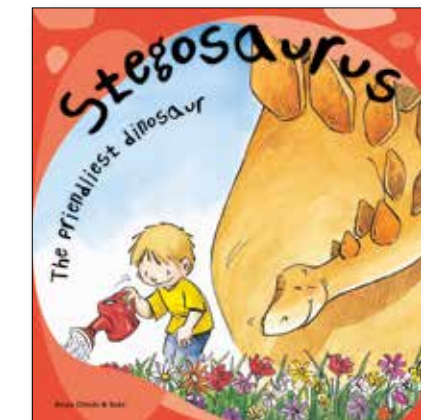

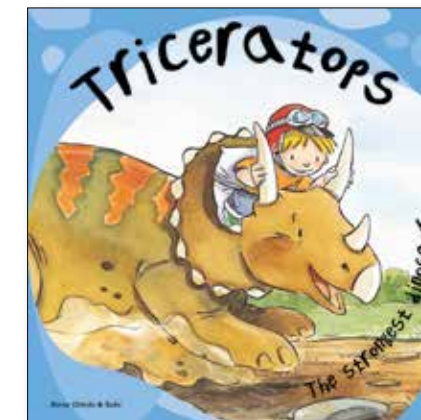

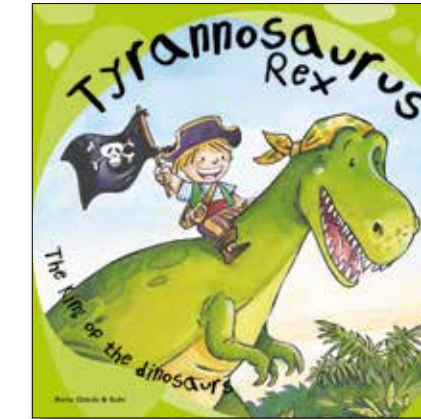

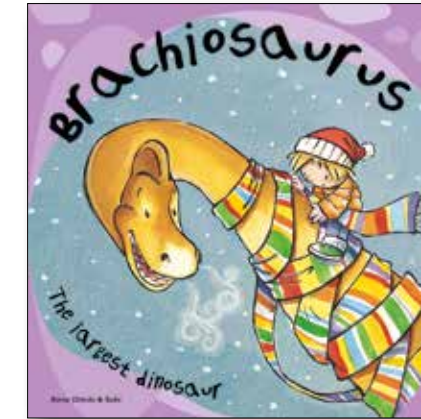

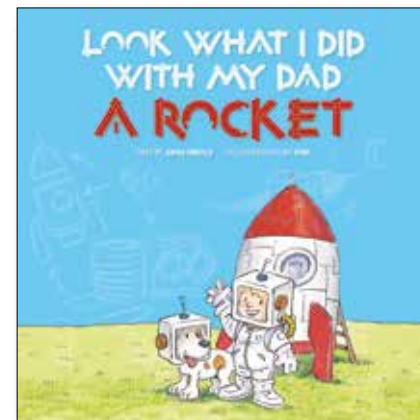

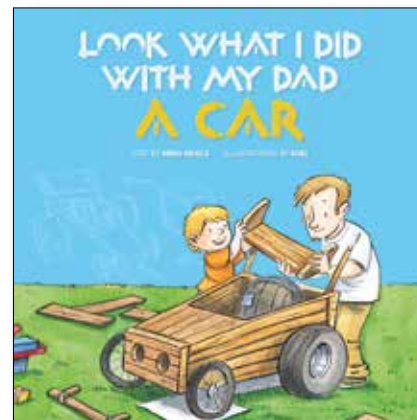

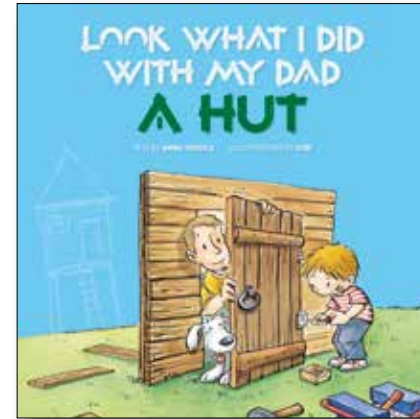

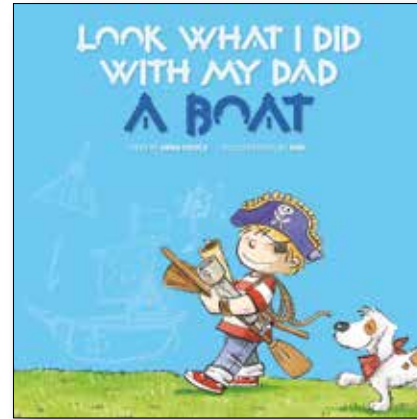

● This series comprises four books, which on one hand encourage the cooperative relationship between the parent and the child and on the other hand, the creativity that every child has. The child thinks of an object and draws it, but in order to construct it, he asks his parent for help. Once it is finished, while playing, the child imagines that he is enjoying endless adventures.

So, in these books, there is a real part that any child can do with his parent and a creative part that lets the imagination run free.

The objects to build are a car, a boat, a rocket and a hut. The last part explains the different types of cars, boats, houses and rockets that man has built over the course of the history of mankind.

● Rose and Sam are brother and sister. So are Lee and Lucy. All 4 are friends and have loads of amusing adventures together while they discover the world, acquire good habits and grow up. As the characters are different ages, this enables us to deal with a range of topics related with different stages of growing up. The adults play a secondary role; they only appear in the situations in which their presence is required for safety reasons. The 4 friends help each other and deal with the various situations that arise. Thus, the books accompany readers aged from 2 to 6 years old. The readers and characters grow together. As there are both male and female characters, it is easy for the children to relate with one of them.

Teddy bear

● The books included in the Teddy Bear series are designed to familiarize children from three to five years old with numbers, shapes, opposites and colors. Numbers from zero to ten are introduced, through simple examples. The great variety of shapes existing in the world includes the most geometrically frequent ones to those that are less common, such as leaves and star shapes. Opposites are presented through thirteen pairs of clearly opposite items. The colors found in our environment are represented with delightful illustrations which the child will easily recognize. Each book is supported by activities for the child to perform following the teddy bear's lead in every chapter, to assimilate what they are learning in a very entertaining way.
