

Little children, when they are so little they are called babies, walk on all fours.
But not all babies, because some prefer to crawl!

Have your parents ever told you how you went from one place to another when you were a baby?

There are many animals that walk on four legs, like babies. Some are huge, like elephants, and others are so small they would fit in your pocket, like mice.

Do you know any other animals that walk on four legs?

When babies grow up, they learn to walk on two legs. At first they have trouble standing up, but with practice all of them end up learning how to walk. There are children who cannot stand up and need crutches or a wheelchair to go from one place to another. Do you need any of these things?
