

Hello friends. It's me again, Ginkgo! Today, I received a book that I would like to show you.

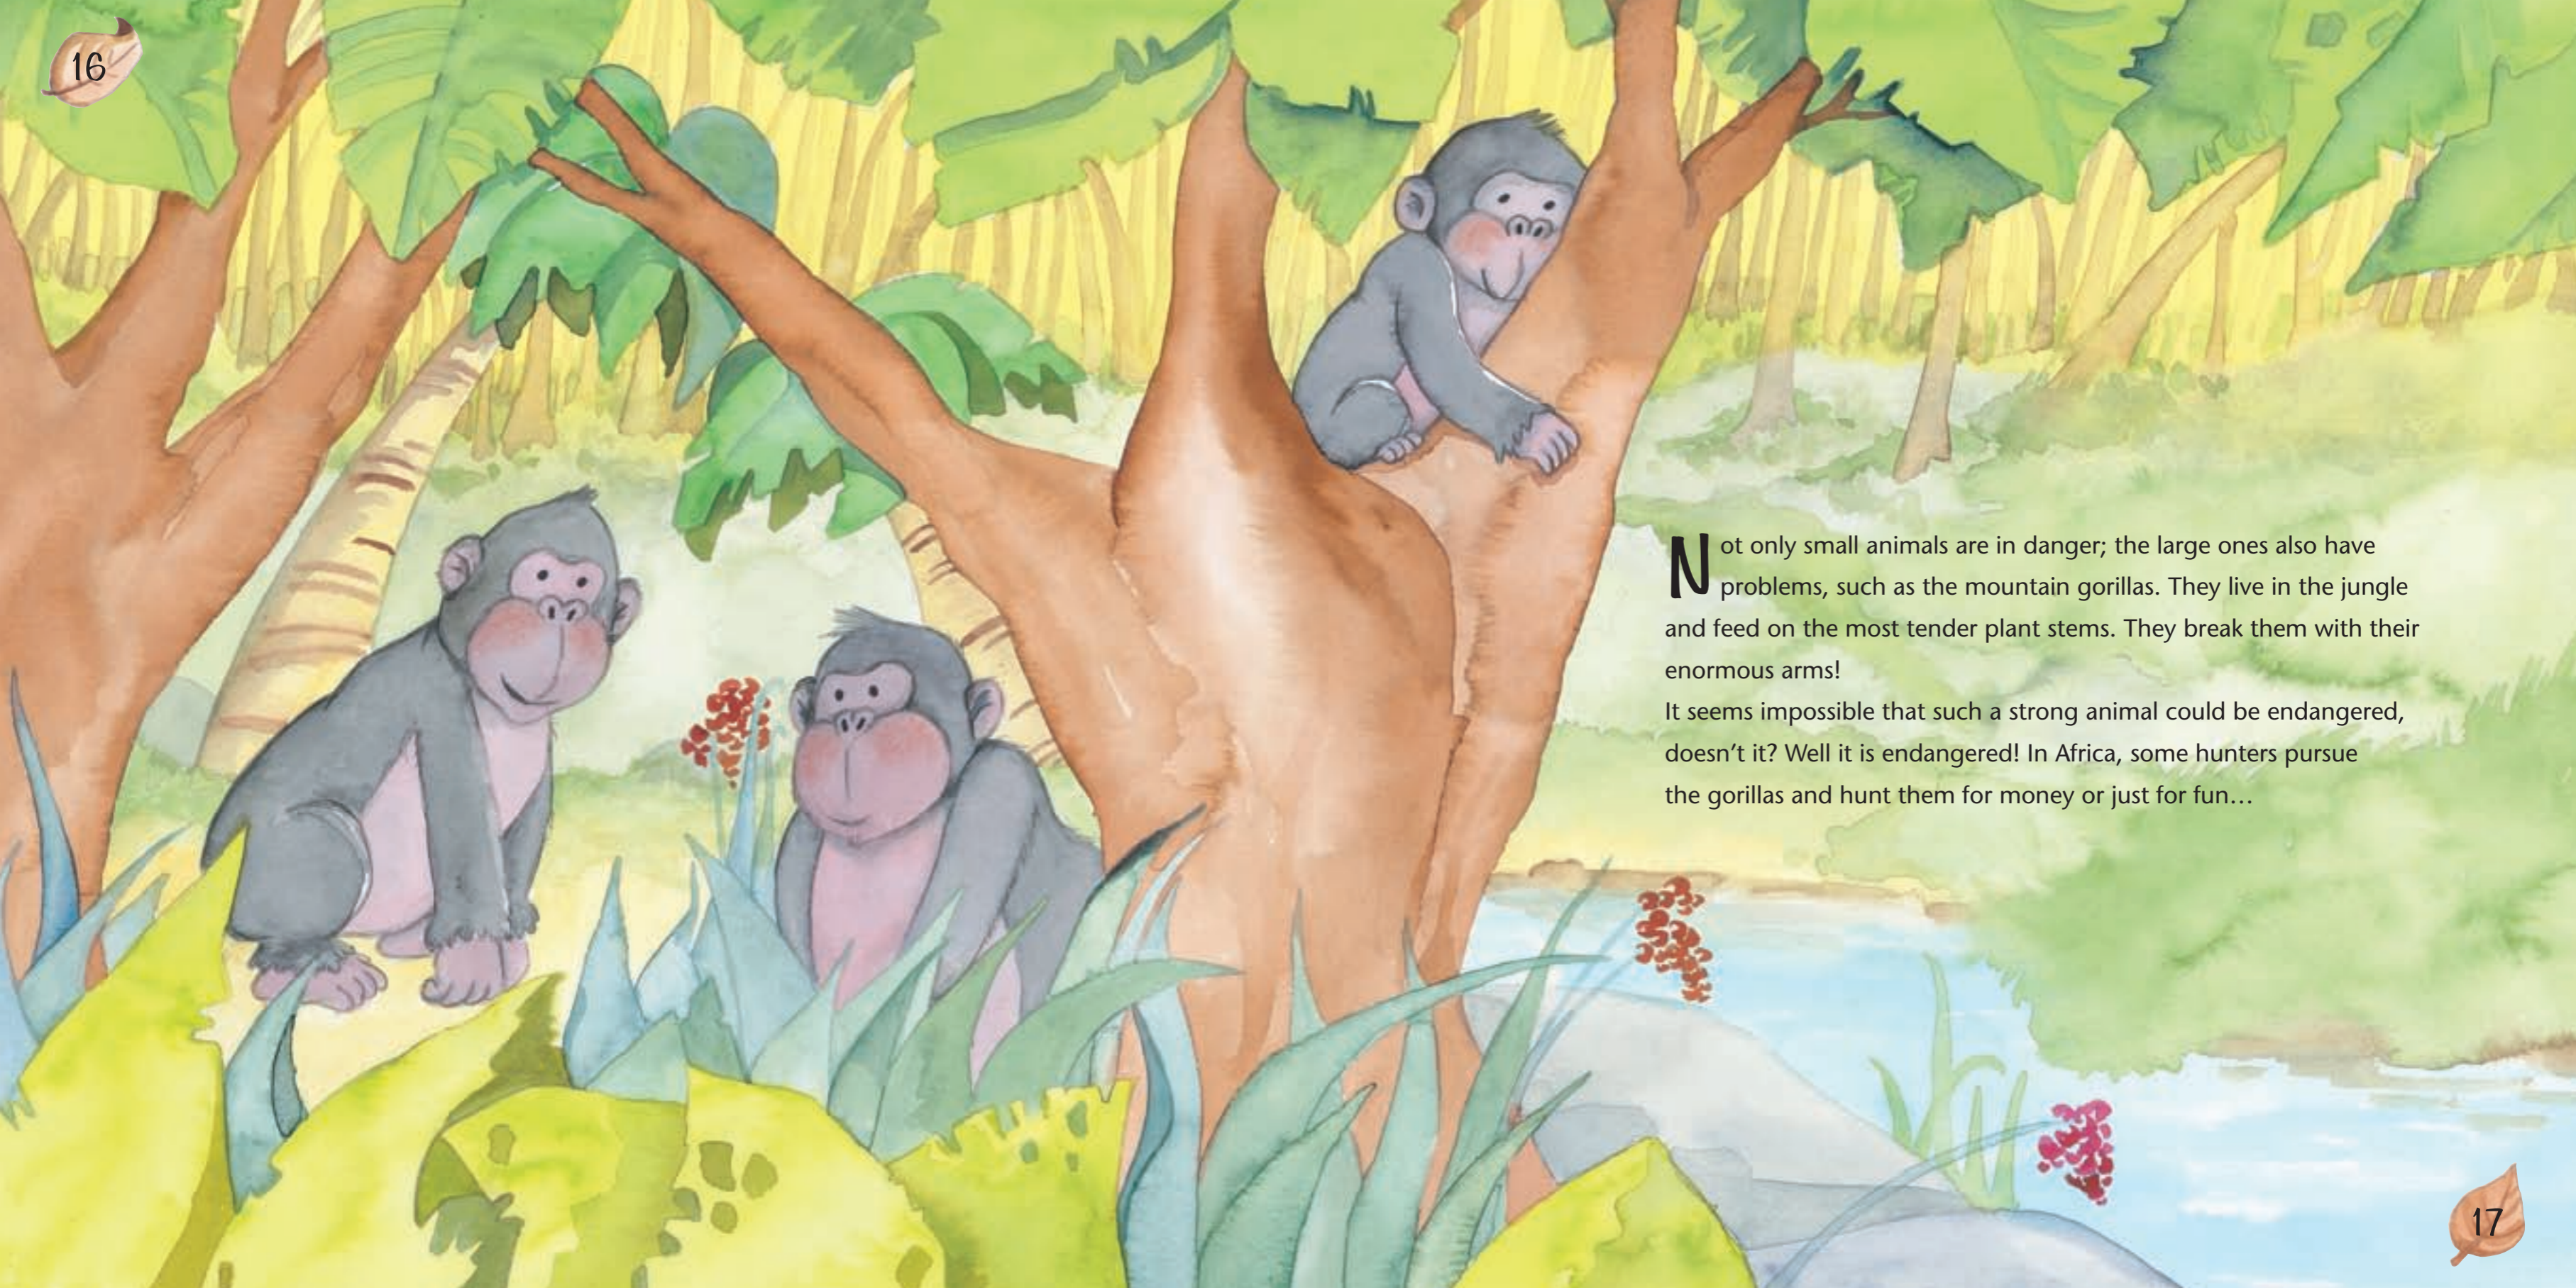

This red book here... It's enormous! Inside, there is a list of all the species in the world that are endangered. It is so large, because many wild plants and animals in the world are threatened... plants and animals that need our help to live freely in the wild.

Some frogs are quite eye-catching, but some more discrete animals also have trouble surviving. Although they live hidden under the ground, some species of rodents are on the verge of extinction.

This is what could happen to the Russian beavers you can see in the photograph. Now, they are only found in a small area of forest and swamps in Russia. If they disappear from there, we will never be able to see them in the wild again...

Not only small animals are in danger; the large ones also have problems, such as the mountain gorillas. They live in the jungle and feed on the most tender plant stems. They break them with their enormous arms!

It seems impossible that such a strong animal could be endangered, doesn't it? Well it is endangered! In Africa, some hunters pursue the gorillas and hunt them for money or just for fun...
