

Goodbye nappies

Sam's mum has explained to him that she is going to take his nappy off and that from now on, he has to tell her when he feel like having a wee.

Sam listens very carefully, but he isn't very sure he understands what his mother is saying. Rose and Lee tell him that without a nappy, he will be able to run better, play more comfortably and go down the slide quicker. But he must pay attention to when he needs a wee to go to the potty straight away.

Us too

Rose, Lee and Sam are in the bedroom. The oldest ones remember when they had their nappies taken off.

"One day, I accidentally did a wee on the toys and we had to wash them all," explains Rose.

"Well one day, I wet my new shoes and they had to change all my clothes!," remembers Lee.

Always clean

Sam has done a poop on his own for the first time and the whole gang congratulates him. Now it's very important that he learns to clean himself well with toilet paper, flush the chain and wash his hands with soap and water. That's a lot of things, but they all help him.
